

06/18/09 - Hamilton Precision choose Jason Barton to build their new website

Hamilton Precision Ltd, an engineering company in Buckingham, United Kingdom have chosen me as the designer and host for their website.

Although Hamilton Precision have been established for over 20 years, they have not felt the need to have a website until now. I was able to demonstrate that I could design an attractive website that would present their company, products and services to the world via the internet

My previous experience working for engineering companies and my marketing skills satisfied them that I understood their business sufficiently to cater for their needs and ensure that their website will attract traffic and new business.

The site is expected to go live in approximately two to four weeks from now.